Dear Alex

PROPOSED PENSIONS BILL – ACCELERATED PASSAGE

I refer to your letter of 15 November seeking clarification on how and when the Department intends to take forward the Northern Ireland Pensions Bill. It is my intention to introduce the Bill in the Assembly at the earliest opportunity. However, before seeking Executive approval for its introduction, I should be grateful for the support of the Committee for Social Development for use of the accelerated passage procedure.

The proposed Pensions Bill is a parity measure. As you are aware, parity covers not only the content of legislation, but also the timing of its implementation. It is, therefore, desirable for provisions of Westminster and Northern Ireland legislation to come into force contemporaneously. The corresponding Westminster Bill received Royal Assent on 3 November. While it will not be possible to maintain exact parity of timing, any time lag in enacting our legislation should be kept to a minimum, particularly where any delay will act to the detriment of people here.

The provisions in the Pensions Act 2011 that came into force on Royal Assent are largely technical and a time lag does not cause any particular difficulty. However, some provisions coming into force two months after Royal Assent deal with substantive issues where parity of timing is highly desirable: in particular, clause 1 which provides for changes to State Pension age.
